THE COMPROMISE WOOL BILL.

Any discussion of the La Follette wool-revision bill on its merits, as compared with the schedules of the present law and those proposed in the Underwood house bill that the senate declined to pass, is irrelevant, superfluous and not germane to the issue. Briefly, it projects a compromise in rates between those now operative and those of the Underwood bill. But it was not drawn on economical or revenue or party-policy lines, but purely and simply as a play at politics for the purpose of putting President Taft "in a hole" and for boosting the boom of the Wisconsin senator for the republican nomination for president in 1912; and no one of the coalition of 48 insurgents and democrats who rushed the bill through the senate without reference to a committee or any consideration of its provisions, if he speak sincerely, will contend that the measure is an honest effort to revise the tariff schedules downward in response to what is alleged to be a popular demand for such revision. Every conservative element among the American people will have nothing but disgust to express over the spectacle that the United States is making of itself just at the present.

The 35 democratic senators who voted for the La Follette bill have merely lent themselves in a scheme for advancing the political fortunes of a republican who has called about himself a dozen or so malcontent senators of his own party to aid in the undoing of the president. These 35 democrats may consider "good politics" and therefore their duty to help in putting in nomination next year a weaker republican candidate than President Taft, but the country will not fail to understand that they are juggling with the tariff for political purposes—and that can not possibly help the democratic cause.

As to the prospects of this compromise wool bill, it has now gone to a joint-conference committee of both chambers, and it is very generally expected that the house conferees will yield to those of the senate and that in the end both chambers will pass the La Follette bill and "put it up to the president." If they do, he will "put it down" promptly and hard—he would veto it almost as surely as the sun will set. And his prestige with the people would not thereby be impaired by one jot or tittle. Nor could the present coalition in the senate muster enough votes to pass the thing over the president's veto. The democrats in the combine understood all this, of course, or they never would have brought themselves to vote for a tariff measure that would, as law, be admittedly protective and entirely out of joint with present democratic ideas of tariff-revision.

Of the 32 republicans who voted against the bill it must perforce be said that they were consistent and sincere in their action and for three reasons. They prefer the Payne-Aldrich schedules to those in the compromise bill; they are under obligations to await the report of the tariff board before attempting revision; and they could not conscientiously join their insurgent brethren in the latter's attack on the administration.

In the whirligig of time and politics this coalition may some day constitute a genuine roll of honor.

DOESN'T HELP THE $150 MAN.

The Bethlehem Steel company has built a car that will carry 150 tons of freight. It is 105 feet long. It was not many years ago when an Atlantic liner, schooner rigged, didn't have a larger capacity. Progress is going some, says the Milwaukee Journal. But it's hard to show that the man who is getting a dollar and a half a day has any particular reason to congratulate himself that we have left the ox-cart behind.

Senator Bailey has resigned from the committee on privileges and elections because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations. The senator's destiny seems to be to flock by himself.

President Taft has assumed the responsibility for the Controller Bay withdrawal. His shoulders are broad and can easily bear it; but better still, his mind is broad.

If Germany receives compensation in the French Congo for the abandonment of her claims in Morocco, will it not be very much like robbing Peter to pay Paul?

CONSERVATION AND RESTORATION.

The work being done by Gifford Pinchot and the National Conservation League is extremely valuable. The value does not consist alone in the services they are rendering to save what is left of the public domain, but in the principles they are impressing on the public mind. There is no argument they advance in favor of saving the remnant of the public lands which does not apply with equal force to the restoration of the rights of the people to the use of resources that have passed into the possession of private monopolies. The platform of the association carried to its logical conclusion is nothing more nor less than the single tax proposition of Henry George. This is made very clear in the paragraph concerning water rights which makes the following demand:

Payment of reasonable compensation for the benefit granted by the people with periodical readjustment of the rate of compensation, so as to insure justice, both to the investor and to the public alike."

If this policy is sound in regard to water rights, and no one has yet been able to show that it is not, it is just as sound in regard to other resources.

No argument can be advanced either on grounds of morality or of expediency in favor of the claim of the Pacific railroads to immense tracks of western lands, of Weyerhaeuser to many square miles of lumber lands, of the Astors to a large part of the land of New York City, or of the Longworths to the land of Cincinnati, that would not apply with equal force to the claim of the Guggenheims to the land in Alaska.

The benefit that will come from blocking the attempt to gobble the coal supply of Alaska is nothing at all compared with the good that would result from giving the people the right to use valuable land much nearer civilization that is being wholly or partly withheld from use. In every city there is enough of such land, the restoration of which would be a thousand times as beneficial as the saving of Alaska.

The conservation movement deserves the best wishes of all good citizens, but should be logical enough not to hesitate to include in its demands the restoration of resources that have been stolen as well as the blocking of thefts now being attempted.—San Francisco Star.

NEVADA TO SUFFER.

After years of forgetfulness of all that Nevada has done for the Union, the wise men at Washington are planning to take the government assay office away from Carson City. It is not done in an open-handed manner, but is worked about in a carefully planned suicidal manner. The mint at Carson is to be forced to be its own executioner and this by means of double charges upon all the work to be done in the mint. The treasury department claims that the office maintained in Carson City, together with several others in the west, have been a dead loss for years. They do not take the time, however, to explain why this loss has occurred.

The department has said nothing about the closing of the mint in this city in relation to the coining of gold and silver, notwithstanding the fact that Nevada produces more of this wealth than almost any other state in the Union. The wealth of Nevada is sent to other states for handling and Nevada is used simply as a producer, and then gets a kick in the seat of the pants for its reward.

Have the express companies such power in Washington that they can force the closing of nearby assay offices and mints and cause the wealth to be transported across the continent, at a high express rate, solely for their benefit? Why not close the mint at Philadelphia and have the wealth coined in the land where it is produced?—Carson News.

HOW TO PRONOUNCE ARKANSAS.

Representative Macon of Arkansas was on his feet objecting to a request for unanimous consent to pass a bill. Uncle Joe Cannon got up to ask a question. He began:

"Will the gentleman from Arkansas—"

Uncle Joe put the accent on the "kan."

"Arkansaw," promptly corrected Mr. Macon, accenting the "saw."

"Well, if the gentleman from Arkansas," said Uncle Joe, once more adhering to his pronunciation, "says that Arkansas is correct, I suppose he knows, because he comes from there. But I remember that a good many years ago, over at the other end of the capitol, when the late Senator Oglesby was in the chair, a senator arose to speak and Oglesby addressed him as the Senator from Arkansas," and Uncle Joe put the emphasis on the "saw."

"That may be true," said Mr. Macon, "but I want to call your attention to the fact that the legislature of my state has passed a resolution officially proclaiming the fact that the proper pronunciation is Arkansaw."

Governor Bleas of South Carolina declares that he approves of lynching. Surely the people of the Palmetto state are entitled to a better governor than that though they did elect him. He disgraces them.

The meat of the matter in this whole Wiley uproar is whether Dr. Rusby of Columbia university is worthy of his higher than the law allows.

In New York four men were sent to prison for speculating in theater tickets. After a while man may expect to be sent to prison for speculating in his own mind on what his ultimate destiny is.

PEACE REIGNS IN PUEBLA.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 3.—Calm reigns again in Puebla after the battle yesterday. The city is gaily decorated in honor of the visit of Francisco I. Madero. Semi-official figures give the number of dead in two days' battle as 68, while 54 were seriously wounded. It is believed that Madero will make the effort of his life to settle the affairs in Puebla peacefully during his visit there, but fears are entertained that he will not be able to do so, as feeling is running high.

Why Send Out of Town for Your Printing

When you can have first-class work done right here, by first-class union printers.

The business man who sends out of town for his printing injures his own business as well as that of others. While on the other hand the man who patronizes home institutions increases the town's pay roll, and thereby builds up his business.

The printers and book binders in the cities of surrounding states do not come here to spend their money.
